WESTVILLE, MISS., Feb. S. 1878. To the Editors of the Clurion : for or against it, but I do think he has zone of "half cocked." If he makes his own the least. He says "for the last two or three tyranny and oppression." For, says he, who is not aware of the fact that lien law men pay more for their merchandise than any other class. This I deay. The merchants of Westville have one price for credit customers and it makes no difference whe her he is under a de-d in trust or running on his face. Some menure honest from principle; others are honest because the hen law, and what is the re-sult? It simply places it on stock and real estate, and perhaps better for the merchant but there are a number of your farmers in Simpson county who own no lands and very little stock, and as a matter of course, if the hen law is repealed entirely those men will suffer. He further says that the merchants advise the lies law men to plant all cotton. This is a mistake so far as the Westville merchants are concerned. We have always advised the farmer to plant a plenty of corn, and as much cotton as he can cultivate. Again, he says the lien law man gets sick. Ah! "thereby hangs a tale." I expect "Vox Topull" is a doctor, and he don't get enough of "the chicken pie," and if the poor her law man gives him one law. I don't think "Vox Populi" understands what a lien law is. I have never seen anything selvertised for sale at the misdemeanor, and punishable, on conviction. seen anything advertised for sale at the Court House door in Westville, except land by removal from office and by a fine of not and stock, and it that comes under the head less than one hundred nor more than five
